Six Trans-Atlantic Lines Complete Arrangements with Government and C.N.R. to Herby Fairable Newcomers Will Be Placed on Canadian Farms—Rebate in Steamship Fare Now Being Promised

TORONTO, Dec. 28.—What promises to be one of the largest movements of immigration into Canada for some years will occur during the first two months of 1924, according to an announcement made by officials of the Canadian National railways today.

Not until the end of March, it is claimed, will there be an end to the influx already insured.

Six trans-Atlantic lines have completed arrangements with the Canadian government and with the National railways for the carrying of the immigrants from Europe. Despite the large number of sailings which have been announced by each line, complete arrangements have been made for the handling of the traffic in Canada.

Strictness of the United States immigration quota is the reason assigned for the acquisition by Canada of these latest newcomers, all of whom, it is stated, will be of the type of citizen whom the government and the various provincial departments of agriculture. Further announcements of the dates of arrival of the various parties will be made by the C.N.R.

The Will Is What Counts.

The Chinese are blamed for having invented paper money, and thus tempted the German authorities to issue more notes than the country can ever pay. The Orientals cannot be made to carry the responsibility because they were the first to resort to that method of standing where the day of settlement. Where there has been found in any case, and the will to put off paying has been constant. It is conspicuously present at Berlin.

One Result.

Chancellor Marx says French hegemony in the Ruhr cannot produce economic results. That is only a picturesque way of stating what is not a fact. Nations do collect by force when other means fail. Germany did not in Belgium. As a result, Chancellor proposes the fact of the occupation policy he has sent to M. Poincare a detailed proposal to negotiate the question of reparations payments. That is one result of the pressure on the French government that the Chancellor cannot well deny.

On the Mend.

Ottawa reports that there are fewer men out of work in Canada now than there were a year ago. True, the betterment is shown in decimals, but it is a welcome indication of changed and changing times. In that province the improvement must be far above the average. There is a noticeable absence of the unemployment "problem" with which most western cities have been regularly afflicted in past years. If immigration during the year has balanced the losses, which is probable, the inference is plain that there is more work being done, more production, or more money being paid out in wages.

Needless Doubts.

The executive of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers tells the world that farming in Western Canada cannot continue under present conditions. That sounds good, but there are no economic considerations. One is that most of the grain growers who have made money in the West have been making it by the sweat of their hands, faced conditions quite as adverse from the standpoint of the individual, and won out by industry and perseverance. These men are not going to quit because the organization officials tell them they cannot farm a living for they know better. Another corollary is that farming will not have to be given up under present conditions for the conditions will have to change. Taxes will have to come down. So will the prices of the farmer's tools. It will be the cost of transportation, as traffic develops. And the farming business itself will have to change. Grain growing will still be the main occupation of the prairie farmer for many years. But inevitably the branches of the business must be built up into more and more importance. The Western farmer is not going to throw up his sponge, pack his belongings on a buckboard and get out. He couldn't do that if he wanted to. He will stay in the country, stay on the farm, and go on getting a little better off year by year, as he has done in the past, despite the moaning of official pessimists who keep warning him that things cannot be done. He will not use conditions by changing methods where he cannot change the conditions. But the C. G. executive used not only the weather but farming will continue in these provinces. It will, and would even if there were no landless agriculturists to raise the doubt.

Making Up The Tax Bill.

Taxpayers of the city who looked to the new council to cut expenditures and keep down the tax rate for the coming year have not got much yet to encourage their hopes. At the first meeting of the year the rates for water, light and telephone services were increased, thus obtaining a surplus over operating costs which can be used for general expenditure. At the next meeting the assessment of buildings for taxation purposes was raised a million dollars. So far as council has gone the aim has been to find ways to get should be added by the voters. On that basis the taxpayer seems to be scheduled to encounter a 1924 tax bill 15 per cent higher than the one he encountered in 1923. Which means that if his taxes in 1924 amounted to one hundred dollars the demand for 1924 will be a hundred and fifteen dollars according to present prospects.

Of course the come-to may be a hundred and fifteen dollars through with the budget. As yet attention has been given only to the revenue side of the problem. The controllable expenditures have still to be dealt with. Radical reductions in the outlay may be made, with the result of keeping the mill rate down to the previous level or even of placing it at a lower figure. Immediately the hope is that the council will make the announcement that a deadlock has occurred in the negotiations for a general reduction in city salaries. Neither has any conclusion been come to with the school boards for slicing a percentage off the teachers' pay. The fact is, it is supposed, will be no more anxious for a cut in pay than the other civic employees are. The council is saving something worth while on wages account and do not therefore look happy. Unless, of course, council should take matters in hand and declare flatly that a reduction has been made.

The money collected as taxes is spent in four ways. Part of it goes to pay interest and provide instalments for the repayment of the city's debt. That obligation has to be met, and council cannot reduce this bill. The balance is spent in the salaries of city employees, in payment for materials, and in grants handed out to various organizations. The latter represents the expenditure that is under control of council, and can be made more or less according to the aldermen's whims.

If the tax rate is to be held down it is here that council will have to wield the pruning knife. The present budget is a good deal of hard study. The best way to make a budget is to know what you are going to do, and then to make it. The best substitute for the real thing is to make it.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Establishing a record for championship action, the pugilistic season of 1933 is drawing to a close. It is so singular if not the greatest ever.

Nine battles with five champions have taken place in world titles changed. Many of the fights during the year, the climax came in the last few months. The season successfully defended his heavyweight title against the Argentine challenger, in the second round at the Polo

Ring's Thirty Acres, but on the whole the 1933 season surpassed all previous years in total financial return. A new high mark for paid attendance was set at the Dempsey-Tyrpe battle, for which 15,000 fans were reported to have gathered. The highest weight championship record was set when 30,000 paid approximately 100,000 fans witnessed the fight.

One of the largest gatherings of the season attended the non-championship affair, the Frits-Willard battle, which drew 10,000 fans.

A Savage Struggle

That savage, furious struggle between the two champions of the "Wild Bull of the Pampa" lasted less than five minutes but, in the eyes of the thousands of spectators, it was the most memorable battle of all time in the ring that has no parallel in boxing history. Knocked out three times in the first round, Firpo came back with a battering rush that drove Dempsey to the ropes and all but toppled the American from his throne, but the champion pushed his opponent to the second round, the final count coming on the South American's ninth knock-

Offerings Limited; Prices Firm at Winnipeg Mart; No Important Features

WINNIEP, Dec. 28.—Values were firm on the local wheat market today, and closed 3-8 higher on a light trade. The limited offerings were well absorbed. The character of the trade was largely reselling, although there was good buying which suggested export business work at lower lake ports and milling interests were also somewhat active at times. Spreading was reported. There was a lower tendency about noon, but this was overcome and prices at one time were 5-8 above yesterday.

Income Tax Losses Have Disturbing Effect—Steel Business Has Hopeful Outlook

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—Heavy selling of stocks for the purpose of establishing income tax losses gave the stock market a reactionary appearance this morning. Pool operations in a number of issues were suspended while the tax selling was in progress.

The closing of United States Steel, which closed 1-2 higher, was a notable feature of the day's trading. The stock closed at 114 1/2, a net gain of 1-2 on the day.

Reactionary movements took place in Corn Producers following the announcement of the decision of an extra dividend of 75 cents and a proposed recapitalization plan, providing for the declaration of a stock dividend of 25 cents and a stock repurchase of 100 million shares.

Fur Fashions and Fangles

They Even Achieve the Lines of the Fashionable Tube Silhouette

No further with a reputation would this of allowing a garment to have built-in fur. They have all sorts of clever fancies which they do to the regions around the shoulder blades to take on any hint of elegance, and they actually manage to achieve the fashionable tube silhouette with no trouble at all. (Small appears to be a paramount consideration. Evening wraps are practically all shown in which length. Among them I see many genuine ermine ones which is rather a new note this season. Ermine, of course, we have always had; but I do not recall seeing so many coats of the genuine for some time. It is exquisite in all white and simple enough for a gown. Indeed we will find it difficult to dissociate the word pelisse and ermine. In our mind, since from time immemorial ermine has been considered the property of royalty, they slip shows it colored and with wide cuffs of black monkey fur and the contrast is striking. But other very exclusive house gives an ermine wrap of snow white perfect pelts, a collar and cuffs of white fox.

A DECIDED departure from the usual showiness of ermine is the wrap of coon ermine shown by one furrier, who tells me that coon ermine is all fur is very good this season. But I am inclined to believe that the majority of women will prefer ermine at least in its natural pure white color. Superb as coats of white ermine are, they are only a thought more lively than their imitations. A charming young woman is wearing a coat of white ermine with the fur worked to imitate ermine, and it is universally admired. One of the smartest furriers showed me a coat of Alaska seal 4 1/2 inches long for less formal evening wear which he termed "a truly superior" garment. It had collar and cuffs of black fur, wonderfully soft and alien, and was lined with silver broadcloth. It was a sturdy and grand dame-type of wrap and one which the staid old woman might well choose.

A Humor Dealer. There have been whispers that "ermines" will not be as popular as it was last season. But certainly there is nothing in the shape of being out this assertion. One seen carved everywhere in tapers, black, coon, brown, nickel, platinum, and beige. There are as many grades of this fur as there are days in the month. Some of it is impossibly cheap and bears little relation to the real Russian lamb, which is wonderfully handsome. In the hands of a workman who understands his business, the pelts are worked in a way to bring out their skin. Baby ermine is being displayed at the moment in a number of stunning garments trimmed variously with kolinsky, fox of different kinds and Alaska squirrel.

Plat more caracul is liked by many and is shown in several fashionable shops. One furrier told me that caracul in coon which I noticed recently had collar and cuffs of Alaska squirrel. There appears to be a smallish caracul in combination with blue squirrel. The latter forms the collar, cuffs and the lower portion of the garment. With it, she wears a small little hat of blue, black and brown, with a wide brim. She says that this could and silver lamp are very "hot" in different fur coats. This is the latest in the department, and it is coming in with a fur coat, down to the knees.

I can do with fur nowadays. With the most skill they dry and match and trim and here until the duplicate seems almost to rival the original. Even the plain rabbit, which was once considered the most common of imitations, is now looked upon with favor. In our grandmothers' day the elite wore Alaska seal, and we were brought up to believe it was superior to anything else in the way of furs. But with government restrictions limiting the number of seals which could be killed, and the demand for furs growing with every year, something had to be done.

Hudson seal, which, as every one knows is sheerer muskrat, is offered as a substitute. And is not behind it in nearly every respect.

Alaska seal of the market. There are any number of women who prefer the rich, lustrous fur of it. Hudson seal to that of the brownish tone of the Alaska variety.

The latter is, of course, the more expensive and wears forever. I notice that it is being given considerable attention this season.

For trimming. I notice it used almost exclusively for those marvelous coats which flare out at the lower edge. A long-haired pelt is necessary to give smartness, and for place a prominent part. I recall only one coat of this type which did not use it, and that by the owner's special order.

Purses and Other Accessories Indulge in Brilliant Colors

Now some stunning new purses not long ago. And a shabby purse for meeting her prominent clients. It can certainly affect your entire costume. Among the very latest are those of Japanese tapestry with very large silk tassels. The tapestry is in which the business woman had to charm soft colorings, blending as gently brought back with her from Paris. And on the side of the skirt was a bit of a draping which also repeated the tapestry idea. The effect of the ensemble was most attractive, and, incidentally, it is an idea worth copying.

Handkerchief Variety. Handkerchiefs continue to grow in importance. There is an absolute craze for colored handkerchiefs now made in the most beautiful designs. Many of the handkerchiefs are guaranteed not to fade. Few of the all-white handkerchiefs are seen, those done in the embroidery being bought largely by the old-fashioned woman, though some dainty handkerchiefs are made of the finest lace or bordered with lace. Point d'Alençon, Valenciennes or any pretty lace—do it be real. To "use and lose" as a dainty woman expressed it, colored handkerchiefs are the thing, and the demand for them has become so general that some of the larger shops have recently given whole windows to the display of colored handkerchiefs in all the new shades.
